

The Moose Poem by Elizabeth Bishop

For Grace Bulmer Bowers

From narrow provinces of fish and bread and tea, home of the long tides where the bay leaves the sea twice a day and takes the herrings long rides,

where if the river
enters or retreats
in a wall of brown foam depends on if it meets the bay coming in,
the bay not at home;

where, silted red,
sometimes the sun sets
facing a red sea,
and others, veins the flats' lavender, rich mud
in burning rivulets;

on red, gravelly roads,
down rows of sugar maples, past clapboard farmhouses and neat, clapboard churches, bleached, ridged as clamshells, past twin silver birches,

through late afternoon
a bus journeys west,
the windshield flashing pink,
pink glancing off of metal, brushing the dented flank of blue, beat-up enamel;

down hollows, up rises, and waits, patient, while a lone traveller gives kisses and embraces to seven relatives
and a collie supervises.

Goodbye to the elms,
to the farm, to the dog.
The bus starts. The light grows richer; the fog,
shifting, salty, thin, comes closing in.

Its cold, round crystals form and slide and settle in the white hens' feathers, in gray glazed cabbages, on the cabbage roses
and lupins like apostles;

the sweet peas cling to their wet white string on the whitewashed fences; bumblebees creep
inside the foxgloves, and evening commences.

One stop at Bass River.
Then the Economies

Lower, Middle, Upper;
Five Islands, Five Houses, where a woman shakes a tablecloth out after supper.

A pale flickering. Gone.
The Tantramar marshes and the smell of salt hay.
An iron bridge trembles and a loose plank rattles but doesn't give way.

On the left, a red light swims through the dark:
a ship's port lantern.
Two rubber boots show,
illuminated, solemn.
A dog gives one bark.

A woman climbs in with two market bags, brisk, freckled, elderly.
"A grand night. Yes, sir, all the way to Boston."
She regards us amicably.

Moonlight as we enter the New Brunswick woods, hairy, scratchy, splintery;
moonlight and mist
caught in them like lamb's wool on bushes in a pasture.

The passengers lie back.
Snores. Some long sighs.
A dreamy divagation
begins in the night,
a gentle, auditory,
slow hallucination. . . .

In the creakings and noises, an old conversation
--not concerning us,
but recognizable, somewhere,
back in the bus:
Grandparents' voices

uninterruptedly
talking, in Eternity:
names being mentioned,
things cleared up finally;
what he said, what she said,
who got pensioned;

deaths, deaths and sicknesses;
the year he remarried;
the year (something) happened.
She died in childbirth.
That was the son lost when the schooner foundered.

He took to drink. Yes.
She went to the bad.
When Amos began to pray even in the store and finally the family had to put him away.

"Yes . . ." that peculiar affirmative. "Yes . . ."
A sharp, indrawn breath, half groan, half acceptance, that means "Life's like that.
We know it (also death)."

Talking the way they talked in the old featherbed, peacefully, on and on,
dim lamplight in the hall, down in the kitchen, the dog tucked in her shawl.

Now, it's all right now even to fall asleep just as on all those nights.
--Suddenly the bus driver stops with a jolt, turns off his lights.

A moose has come out of the impenetrable wood and stands there, looms, rather,
in the middle of the road.
It approaches; it sniffs at the bus's hot hood.

Towering, antlerless,
high as a church,
homely as a house (or, safe as houses).
A man's voice assures us
"Perfectly harmless. . . ."

Some of the passengers exclaim in whispers,
childishly, softly,
"Sure are big creatures."
"It's awful plain."
"Look! It's a she!"

Taking her time,
she looks the bus over,
grand, otherworldly.
Why, why do we feel (we all feel) this sweet sensation of joy?

"Curious creatures,"
says our quiet driver,
rolling his r's.
"Look at that, would you."
Then he shifts gears.
For a moment longer,

by craning backward,
the moose can be seen on the moonlit macadam;
then there's a dim
smell of moose, an acrid smell of gasoline.
