This is my last journal entry and I am glad to say that I actually had fun with the Senior Project. We just came back from spring break and I already want another break. While on break I worked hard to finish the seven modes essay for level four. Now all I have to do is start on the power point for the exit interview. The day I present my practice exit interview power point will be on April 22. The way that it'll be happening is four people will be looking over my website and on the day of my practice interview these four people will have some knowledge of my work. It is basically right around the corner and to say the truth I am a little nervous. On April 28th is my actual date to do my exit interview appointment so I really have to prepare all of my work to get some good feedback.

Now that we are back, there is no time to waste because there are so many things that have to be done. I am really concerned about my grade in Physiology because Mrs. Zamora has been gone and since we have a substitute it is hard to stay on pace. When she does come back the class is going to be in big trouble well I think she will be a little disappointed because some of us haven't done anything to finish up her class. On the other hand I am passing my other classes so that's all that counts but I am going to try my best to finish up with physiology.

April 12th is the day of the Orange Blossom and our school band will be participating in it. I never pictured myself to be a part of it and I feel like it will be a great experience since this is my first year in band. The instrument I play is the flute and the flutes go up in the front of everyone else. Yesterday at five our band met up for marching practice to play our instruments while we marched; it was pretty challenging especially turning corners. Every step we take has to be in order with the rest of the band players or else it doesn't look professional and I believe these marching practices will do us good.

Moving to this school was probably one of the smartest decisions I have ever made. Being at this school has made me realize what kind of person I really am. I'm someone who is determined to finish everything that is needed and I really do care about being the best that I can so my younger siblings can follow my footsteps at graduating high school and walking with their class.
